QUEBEC, July 19.—Every steamer which sailed at night in the history of the Empire of Britain, bearing delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference.

A crescendo of sound greeted the big vessel as it swept into view from the far-off distance behind the Isle of Orleans.

Official greetings to the delegates were made by Dominion, provincial and municipal officials. As far as the government was concerned, the official party were on board meeting representatives of the government from Great Britain, Northern Rhodesia and South Africa.

IN OFFICIAL PARTY

Included in the official party were

Premier L. A. Taschner of Quebec, Hon. J. C. Durnea, Minister of

Durneau and Hon. Arthur Sauve, of the Dominion government, Sir William MacKenzie, Canadian Minister in Canada and Mayor

Leopold of Quebec.

Their hosts lined the historic cliff behind the dock, waving and cheering, shouting and clapping and otherwise sounding a royal welcome.

And almost 175 years ago, another group of Englishmen, uninvited, when time climaxed the tumultuous days of the American Revolution, landed on Canadian soil. The Empress docked at Quebec.

St. Lawrence, leader of the British delegation, sounded the key note of the conference when he said: "We are here to work and to co-operate, to bring about an agreement, to end the existing difficulties, and he added gravely, "may our hope be upheld."

Hon. N. C. Havenga, South African minister of finance, brought greetings from the Empire, the people of the southern hemisphere.

PICTURESQUE INDIA

Sir Abdur Chatterjee, head of the Indian delegation, a touch of picturesqueness to the short processions in evidence at the opening of the Empire gathering.

For an hour or more after the Empress had docked, the throng thronged the pier to catch a glimpse of the delegates. Stanley Baldwin, the British prime minister, down the gang plank. So was Jim Thomason, who has his official title, Hon. J. H. Thomas.

SLAYER SEARCH BAFFLES POLICE

ROSSBURN, Man., July 19.—In their search for the murderer of Forest Ranger Lawrence Lee, police have concentrated on the absence of stubborn silence on the part of residents of Riding Mountain National Park, as well as the lips of those who might give information as to the killing.

Mrs. Lee, terribly wounded in the head, was shot in the back while riding her horse, is in hospital, taxing her memory to the limit. She is the only witness the aid of the police. Motive of the killing is now believed to be robbery, as the killer sought to ward off a prosecution for some offence on which Lee was about to lay information.

Parley To Set Whole World Example

BALDWIN SEES OPPORTUNITY OTTAWA MEET

Well-being of Every Unit of Empire Enhanced by Agreement

By GEORGE HANLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, July 19.—Right Hon. William Baldwin, Canadian Minister of British delegation, sees in the Ottawa conference a valuable opportunity for a situation similar to the Empress of Britain arrived in Quebec last week to begin negotiations with the government of the province of Ontario to make trade agreements and thus promote the welfare of every unit of the empire. This was a cause which, for its own sake lay claim to the attention, but there was also another opportunity.

"We believe," Mr. Baldwin said, "that in this meeting we can set an example to the whole world in breaking down obstacles to commerce and the promotion of agriculture, industry and trade and the better peoples safety through the true expression of recent times."

EXPENSIVE PLEASURE

Mr. Baldwin said: "I am glad to have this opportunity of expressing on behalf of the Canadian government our pleasure at arriving in Canada on our way to what we hope and believe will be the most momentous gathering in the history of the British empire. We have had to travel across the Atlantic, in circumstances of convenience and indeed luxury such as we have not known since the first colonial conference was held in Ottawa 33 years ago."

"We are grateful to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the Canadian Air Lines for the comfort in which we have travelled these few days. We are proud that a British delegation, including the Queen, British ships have always done in everything, that they can minister to the needs of the world and those who travel by sea. 'Empress of Britain' built and engine'd by a Canadian company and bearing Canadian names, is a symbol of that which is most fine in the British Commonwealth," he said.

MUCH USEFUL WORK

"We have done much useful work on board. Not only have we conferred with the Canadian government and with the industrial, financial and other men with whom we have been working, but we have been meeting with our fellow delegates from the Empire and the Commonwealth and I am glad to say that we have made good progress."

"At the conference itself, there is little that you will expect to say at this moment. The fact that all the members of the British Kingdom cabinet have come to Canada is of importance, but we are all in Great Britain, attach to it."

We are here to meet the Canadian government on this mission and look forward to playing our part in the important work which now lies immediately ahead."

Police Court

When L. E. Oliver released the brakes of his car outside a Jasper avenue bridge and it rolled back four feet, a policeman said he thought he had settled the matter when he stopped the driver. But he is on relief and is facing a charge of stealing $60 from John Burns.

Preferential Tariff Favored By Premier

Preferential tariff is to be preferred to a wheel quota for the benefit of the Canadian grain on the British market, according to Premier J. E. Brown.

The premier expressed his doubts on any advantage from any scheme which would not be mutual.

He felt that the preferential tariff was a matter that could be settled by the British government.

He said that the British government had agreed to a wheel quota.

IF IT WILL HELP ALBERTA THE EDMONTON BULLETIN IS FOR IT

TUESDAY, JULY 19

NO CLEARER THAN BEFORE.

Mr. S. O'Keeffe, head of the Free State delegation to the Imperial Economic Conference, says the Free States will still be a member of the British Commonwealth of nations even if the oath of allegiance were removed from its constitution and from the declaration required of members of the Dominions.

Perhaps it would, but perhaps it wouldn't. It may be conceivable as an abstract theory that the Commonwealth could exist with the common members not bound together by an oath to some central office and its occupant.
Practically, a structure of that kind could not stand a strain, any more than a house built of boards and scantlings not nailed together.

Mr. O'Keeffe and Mr. O'Malley were trying to qualify for a place at the Imperial Conference on speculative grounds alone. He may not be surprised if the representatives of the other Dominions fail to see that his explanation clears up the question of the Free State's prospective relationship to the other members of the Commonwealth.

THE TRADE DOESN'T FLOW

The directors of the bank of international settlements
have decided that the nations should go back to the gold standard, as the monetary system best suited to make possible the free flow of the world's trade.

The directors may propose but the nations will disagree.
And at present there is not observable, among the countries which went off the standard any anxiety to get back on it. The United States, Canada and the Argentine are concerned to have a good deal of the best of it.

The United States, France, South Africa and Canada are not enjoying any free flow of trade, the resolutions of the directors to the contrary.

The directors of the Bank of International Settlements
will have to wait for the arrival of the Argentine.

To allow for one illuminating detail, Canada has now more wheat on hand from the half-cent of last year than from 1926, while Australia and the Argentine, both of the gold standard, had sold more and paid off their debts.

If the gold standard had anything to do with that, Australia and the Argentine are likely to stay off the standard, and Canada ought to get off, whatever the directors of the bank of international settlements may think about it.

THE FAIR IS THE ALTERNATIVE.

The attendance at Calgary's exhibitions and stampede last week came within 12 per cent of the figures of last year.

Congratulations are due to the management and to all who had to do with the enterprise, on this splendid showing.

To some, the attendance at the exhibition is something of an achievement. To others, that close to the attendance figures of last year is one of which the people of the southern city may well be proud.

For the fair, there may have a surprise in store for those who doubt the availability of the money to make the
this year measure up to the standard of former years.

The advance sale of tickets has been large, there are signs of a great deal of interest in the event
among the citizens of the city, and first week attendance records are likely to rival those of a year ago.

If prevailing conditions do not encourage holdovers, they give a preference to the cheaper as against the more expensive seats, the western provinces and northern Alberta are taking early trips to the Coast or the eastern provinces than in more prosperous times, more of them are remaining at home and will be disposed to treat themselves to the relatively inexpensive entertainment to be got from visiting the Fair.

PUTTING IT UP TO OTTAWA.

The city council of Edmonton and Calgary have decided to stop extending relief to single unemployed men at the end of the month.

The decision is, of course, taken because of the serious position into which the civic finances have been brought by the long continued strain of granting relief to several thousand unemployed men.

The influence of this strain is working backward from the city treasury to the taxpayer. That it makes civic financing difficult is at least important consideration. It is taxes which comes at a time when the taxpayers are least able to pay.

Continued indefinitely, this disintegrating process must mean the taking over of more property for non-payment of taxes, the loss of homes to the owners, and the cutting down of the services of the public which taxes can be taken.

As western cities generally have been suffering in the same way, it is to be expected, as these two Alberta centres, the probability is that the other communities will follow the lead of those of Edmonton and Calgary, and that a few weeks hence civic relief for single unemployed men will be stopped in the west.

It is rather to be hoped that will be the case. Should it happen, the Dominion Government will be faced directly with the necessity of taking charge of that branch of the unemployment program and dealing with it. And there does not seem to be any reason why the Dominion will do this until the cities force the matter.

It is to be supposed the Dominion Government will be properly informed of the decision that has been reached at Edmonton and at Calgary, and will be in a fair position to all concerned. It is doubtful if there is any unemployment at any wage at all in Alberta for those who are to be cut off the lists in these two cities. They must not be simply thrown on the streets, with no official representations to the cities to the present.

The councils are acting to save taxpayers from being driven into the ranks of those that need relief. They should also, by notifying Ottawa, take action to prevent those who are to be denied civic relief from falling into destitution.

MESSENGERS RECALLED

The death of Lord Plumer removes one of the most successful, and one of the most popular, of Britain's military leaders.

He came to prominence during the South African war,
when his command in the historic battle of Maf-fing. In the great war he was employed in more than one capacity, including command of the Second Army, which included a number of Canadian divisions.

To those who served under him at that time his passing will recall memories of the successful fighting, and the equally successful strategy, that won the battle of Messines and started the Flanders offensive.

The Passing Show

By J. S. Cooper.

Poetry Day at the old stand, today.

A chap who likes to rest of ships, and sailors in this columns wants to know if I can supply him with the words of the old sailor chanty "Fifteen men on a dead man's chest."

Alas, I cannot. Nor I fear can any other person. "Fifteen men on a dead man's chest" is not an ancient song of the sea. It came from the genius of Robert Louis Stevenson to entertain the world with his "Treasure Island."

Stevenson made his pirate sing:

Fifteen men on a dead man's chest—

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum!

Drink and the devil have done for the rest—

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum.

The words have a ring of the sea and the reck of the sea's bite, but Stevenson stopped there. More poetry, please.

Sailors' chanties are all well known for certain pulling and hauling. There are captain chanties, chanties for hauling on ropes and chanties for pulling on sheets. "Sheets" be known are not sails or awnings. When Clark Russell wrote

A wet sheet and a flowing sea

And a wind that follows fast

he revealed the landsman in him. A sheet is a rope and a wind that follows fast" is a wind that follows fast.

Under the heading of the chanties would be admitted to participation unless they were outlawed out of all recognition.

Several writers have tried to build up a satisfactory sea chanty in Stevenson's foundation first verse. Young E. Allison editor of an insurance journal, who died last month in Louisville, Kentucky, built it up into a three stanza ballad set to music under the title "A Piratical Ballad," and later into a song.

The first stanza of Allison's poem, after picking up the above quoted first four lines of Stevenson's, goes on:

The mate was fished by the boy's pine,

The boy was a mate in a marrikin

The mate's throat was marked belike,

It had been gapped

By fingers ten;

And then they lay—

Like break-o-down in a boning den—

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum.

Lloyd Osbourne, step-son of Stevenson, to whom "Treasure Island" and "The Island" refers, says that "Fifteen Men on a dead man's chest" was wholly original with Stevenson. What a pity R.L.S. did not expand it.

For those who would like to know a few sea chanties in imitation of their original salutes, will find a pictorial description of them in the book "The Anchors Aweigh" by Fitzgerald, the author of the "Treasure Island" of the Anchors Line.

He tells how he came to do it. He was far out on the Atlantic one night listening to a radio programme from London, when a man said he was a "Dove of Rest." He decided to make it fine flour and, in good voice, but the old skipper missed something. There was nothing of the rhythmic strains of sailing men, bending to their heavy tasks in a ship. There was nothing of the rhythmic strains of men braced, or pumps manned. The singer sang it as a song, not as a work of men on hazardous, tolling labor. So the Commander, as he was, had to make the chanties seem real to himself, and he did it by inventing his own philosophy of clothes and symbols in the music.

His collection includes the merry "Leave Her, Johnnie, Leave Her"—surely when a windjammer is making port and the captain is manned for the last time.

Mention of quatrains recalls that a very accomplished lady, who knows far, far more about poetry than I, a few days ago, asked with a smile, "What is a quatrain?"

She was from an Omar Khayyam Society. Mrs. Fitzgerald had invented the character in order to give her matrimony to her verse, much as Carlyle invented Her Falstaff in order to ventilate his philosophy of clothes and symbols in his "Sister Renée," who was an armchair.

Now, to find in Sir John Betjeman's "Tennyson and his poetry" that there really was an Omar Khayyam, who loved wine and women, was sustained by his robust little beliefs, and who believed that

A hat of bread, a jug of wine—

With the bough,

Be beside me in the wilderness,

And wildernes were Paradise now.

Fitzgerald, it appears, had been introduced to the study of Persian by a friend at Ipswich, who was in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, came across a rare MS. of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, and, being a collector of Persian black ink, with blue headings, gold initials and delicate Oriental illustrations in blue, gold and green. The E. B. Cowell, made a copy of the Persian verses for Fitz-Gerald to amuse himself with.

The rest of the story is equally interesting. FitzGerald translated the verses, preserving their original form with the first, second and fourth lines rhyming. He did not expect to be paid for his task.

"Very few people," he wrote at the time, "even certainly not to be literate, and added, "I hardly know why I print any of them."

Fitz-Gerald's Magazine had kept him for a year before using it, and FitzGerald had to ask for its return. He had 250 copies printed, for which he found no sale, even though his book had an armchair listing from five shillings to one shilling, and then to one penny.

Swinburne bought six copies for sixpence, showed them to friends, and the demand started. The bookseller jumped the price to twopence. The last score of the copies were sold at a guinea apiece. Since then Fitz-Gerald's work has become one of the most popular in the English language.

From other sources I learn that Omar was a mathematician and astronomer, and was given a position at the Persian court as a Chamberlain, the position thereby enabling him to pursue his studies in science and literature.

This Voltaire of the East was engaged in 1794 in revising the mathematical tables and is author of a standard work on algebra.

He is not the only mathematician to show an imaginative adorned with fantasies. "Lewis Carroll," author of "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," the story is well known, but well known, of how he became Alice.

Queen Victoria, charmed with the adventures of Alice in Wonderland, caused a full set of all his author's works.

Curious someone was playing an unseemly joke when he received a half dozen volumes on differential calculus,
"Curiosa Mathematica," and such like subjects by Prof.
Dodgson.

One of Leyden's customers was slow in paying. In desperation Leyden sent the bill with a letter stating:

"Sir—Who bought a lot of goods from me and did not pay? You didn't pay in six months? You who is not a scoundrel, a thief and a liar?"—Yours truly, Al Leyden."

"Sir—Who bought a lot of goods from me and did not pay? You didn't pay in six months? You who is not a scoundrel, a thief and a liar?"—Yours truly, Al Leyden."

Legion Members In Pilgrimage of Remembrance

Ex-Soldiers March to Edmonton Cemetery in Tribute to Dead Comrades

Two hundred men marched down Jasper Tuesday in a pilgrimage of remembrance for old comrades when the Legion's annual convention of the Canadian Legion's post soldiers to the men who rest under the shadow of the Cross of Sacrifice and gleaming crusader's award at the Edmonton cemetery.

At the head of the marching men, in full array of warlike and—instead of dross—khaki was the famous band of the Royal Canadian Dragoon Guards, with the sun's glint on silver medals and brass instruments. The band marched in the straight files of marching men, wearing "civvies" instead of the "tunics" of the Legion. The marching men, straight, populous-lined roads of Flanders and Picardy, marched in the same marching rifles with the old pack joggings their backs.

The parade fell in at the Memorial Hall here at 11 o'clock, with J. P. Thompson, president of the Legion, and Jan Stewart Irvine, carrying a wreath of poppies in front of the band. Captain Fred James, and his band, the rank and file of the parade, marched in the column and buck private mingled in the ranks.

WEST ON VICTORIA

With snap and precision, 200 left for the memorial at 11 o'clock, the band having been joined by the parade and the parade went on Victoria, carrying a wreath of poppies in front of the band. Captain Fred James, and his band, the rank and file of the parade, marched in the column and buck private mingled in the ranks.

BAND PLAYS BAND

As the band played, the band played softly, the men singing the words.

Venerable Captain Lancaster was here to pay his respects. He had started "Our Father" and after him the men recited the words in the Rock of Ages.

As the band played, the band played softly, the men singing the words.

President Thompson stepped forward and laid the scarlet wreath at the base of the cross.

President Thompson and the men chanted it triumphantly.

MANY RESOLUTIONS

Up to the parade the convention adjourned in the Macdonald and considered a number of resolutions, many of them having to do with unemployment, hospitalization

SIXTY BEAUTIFUL GIRLS

Sixty beautiful girls, acrobats, singers, and for merriment various kinds were gathered together in a garrison hall, June 25, to raise money for the Canadian Red Cross Fund, Canada.

Against a setting of the gayest colors, the girls, in their brilliant silks and alights with sparkling ornaments and elaborate head-dresses, paraded in a swirl of youth and beauty in the night. Their dancing, particularly in the waltz, was a success, and there was something quite new and drew down the cheers of the audience in the form of a pageant of nations was one of the most elaborate and beautiful ever presented on an indoor stage.

Other artistic selections were added to the lighter jazz numbers presented by Miss Tennessee, Miss Minnesota, Mr. and Mrs. Mr. Hawe, tenor, and Mr. Fein, baritone, in their quartet duet, and the girls sang "The Singing of the Hills" for the beautifully staged Rio Rita number and a Russian number, both at a high order.

JUGGLING JEWELS

Sixty beautifully gowned girls the juggling jewels turned out their new act with their glittering clubs and gave a highly skillful performance.

Odysseus Trio were three of the most rhythmic acrobats to be seen in many a garrison hall, and the audience was one of the finest.

May, Teddy and Eddie did some dancing that would have been the envy of any dancer in the world.

The girls in the garrison hall show and were right there with the latest New York step.

Music and dancing was a colorful and popular number.

Everyone agreed that it was worth the price of admission. Their stunts and acts were well done, and the contention that some dogs have more sense than many humans.
